

Greeba Castle, Main Road
Greeba

One of the Isle of Man's most distinctive private houses, the former home of celebrated writer Sir Hall Caine.

Built in Victorian Gothic style in 1849, Greeba Castle retains many original features and provides a unique opportunity to acquire a gracious home of literary and historical stature. Set in some seven acres of secluded grounds the castellated residence, which requires some updating, is distinguished by elegantly proportioned rooms with lofty ceilings.

Complementing the imposing main residence is a separate guest/staff cottage, a sensitive contemporary re-imagining of the former stable block, while deep in the wooded grounds is the studio, (now derelict), used by Hall Caine for his writing.

Features include:

- Wealth of original features, including decorative cornices, deep architraves, parquet flooring, solid oak and pine joinery; stained glass window detailing;
- Drawing room;
- Formal dining room;
- Sitting room;
- Breakfast room;
- Kitchen;
- Five/six bedrooms;
- Two/three bathrooms;
- Oil fired central heating;
- Alarm system;
- Fully modernised three-bedroom two-bathroom cottage;
- Approximately seven acres of secluded grounds.
